Bismarck Veterans Memorial Public Library Presents Parenting in the Digital Age

WHAT:

Is There an App for That? Parenting in the Digital Age: Featuring National Expert Erin Walsh

Elementary-age kids are spending more and more time online. While media headlines suggest that media and technology are either good or bad for kids – evidence suggests that they are powerful. The good or bad depends upon how we use them. In this interactive and energizing workshop, Erin Walsh will explain how technology is changing the ways that children grow up, socialize, and make decisions. She will cut through conflicting messages and walk through the latest evidence on topics like safety, online cruelty, and mental health. Participants will leave with practical tools and strategies for tackling difficult conversations, building trust, and being the media mentor that kids desperately need as their digital worlds expand. This event is offered at the library through a partnership among NDSU Extension, Bismarck Public Schools, and Bismarck-Burleigh Public Health.
